

Daniel Reimel

OUTSTANDING STUDENT IN MANAGEMENT

The faculty's unanimous choice for outstanding student in Management is Daniel Reimel.

Aside from his exceptional accomplishments in the classroom, Daniel has earned the respect and admiration of his Professors through his work as a Research Assistant. The Convener of our Management Program, Professor Rikki Abzug, who had the pleasure of working with Daniel both in the classroom and during a summer Coop, proudly states that "Daniel is a true role model for all students at Ramapo—he consistently performs at the highest level and is an inspiration to all his classmates." Professor Abzug goes on to ask whether it would be possible for Daniel to "clone himself?"

Daniel applies the same level of commitment, and attention to quality in his efforts to help his community. After learning construction skills from his grandfather, Daniel worked with the St. Matthews Youth Group to plan and execute several house restoration projects in his community.

Daniel has also found time to gain valuable work experience. He completed an internship assignment with BMW North America as a product and sales training intern.

Daniel aspires to one day hold an executive-level position for a fortune 1000 firm. Please stay in touch Daniel - - I plan to invest in that company when you're leading it.
