

E-Cigarettes

Alan Bogdanov

- E-Cigarettes typically come in two forms, vape and juul.
- The US has a regular user base of more than 9 million people.
- Most products are made in Shenzhen, China and are shipped around the world.
- There is currently no fair trade arrangements for e-cigarettes in the US.
- E-cigarettes are split into vape and juul based on the nicotine contained within.
- Juul always has nicotine while in vape it is optional
- As E-cigarettes are relatively new, the health concerns over vaping for years on end is unknown. As a result, there is controversy over how harmful E-cigarettes actually are, if they are.
- Although there may not be as many people that vape/juul as compared to traditional cigarettes, the number is constantly on the rise. Within the next few years, E-cigarettes will likely become a standard part of world culture with users all over the world.
