

Fridging Cecil Borgono

Faculty Mentor: Satarupa Dasgupta Ramapo College of New Jersey, Mahwah, NJ, 07430

Abstract

On August 1994, a new Green Lantern comic titled "Forced Entry" inspired a phrase that has since become a trope in media. The phrase "Stuffed into the Fridge" is commonly shortened to 'fridged' which as been popularized by Gail Simone. 'Fridged' can be define as a character that is killed for the sole purpose to motivate another character to move the plot forward. I perused multiple tv tropes categories, sifting through examples of how characters have died, along with the circumstances of said death. I viewed multiple demographics of characters, in order to find the prevalent denominator amongst them. The resulting numbers were compiled into a graph to better depict the likelihood of certain characters being fridged. Out of thirty-one characters, the most common character to be fridged were white women at 54.8% of the sample size. Sadly, this is a reflection on society and its connection to hegemonic masculinity.

Gail Simone- The woman who popularized the term 'fridging.' She was able to due to a website she created called "Women in Refrigerators."

TV Trope Pages Used For Sample Size

- Cynicism Catalyst
- Disposable Women
- Revenge by Proxy
- Targeted to Hurt the Hero

Statement On Data Collected

Please note that this is only live action media consumed in the western market for precision and accuracy.

The image on the right is part of the Green Lantern comic "Forced Entry" that inspired the creation of "fridging."

