SAVE DARFUR

One person can help change the world

By Rachael Nagy

Many people have heard the words "Save Darfur" and "Stop the genocide in Darfur," but that is usually all they know about the entire situation. Darfur is an area in largest country in Africa called Sudan. Darfur is about the size of Texas and lies in western Sudan and borders Libya, Chad and the Central African Republic. There are about 6 million people who inhabit Darfur, and they are among the poorest in Africa.

The situation in Darfur was not always like it is now. Genocide wasn't always present in this part of the world. This conflict in Darfur began in 2003 after lots of poverty and oppression, two rebel groups - the Sudanese Liberation Army/Movement (SLA/M) and the Justice and Equality Movement (JEM) - mounted an insurgency against the central government. The government in Sudan has not been much help in resolving the genocide that is occurring in this region. The Sudanese Military has been painting their aircrafts white as to confuse the people of Darfur.

The UN humanitarian aircrafts are also white. It is directly against international humanitarian law for the Sudanese government to make their aircrafts the same color as the UN crafts. Because of this, Darfuris never know whether it is UN or their own government coming for them. Usually it is the latter, and it ends in bombing and death. This scorched-earth campaign by the Sudanese government against Darfuri civilians has, through direct violence, disease, and starvation, already claimed as many as 400,000 lives.

The genocide has spilled over into neighboring Chad and the Central African Republic. About 2.3 million Darfuris have fled their homes and communities and now reside in a network of internally displaced persons (IDP) camps in Darfur, with over 200,000 more living in refugee camps in Chad. These defenseless people are almost entirely dependant on the UN and other humanitarian forces to aid them with basic human needs, such as water, food, shelter, and health care. There are still about one million people of Darfur who are living in their villages in the region. Every day is a threat of violence, murder, rape, and torture, not to mention starvation and disease. The UN has approved a United Nations peacekeeping force, that is suppose to go in and aid these people and hopefully stop or bring a relief of these awful events that have been taking place. However, it has not been put into swing yet. The force has been approved by the U.N. Security Council Resolution 1769. Until they get in there, all these people have is the very understaffed, spread-thin African peace keeping force. They are currently doing what they can, but they do not have the means or the people, just 7,400 troops and personnel, to do a job that takes at least triple that to save these people and this region.

Darfur has become the only incident declared a genocide while it was still taking place. George Bush has acknowledged this, and says we will not put up with such events. However, we are doing little as a government to stop it. More is going on through small groups and grassroots organizations.

That is an official site that the SAVE DARFUR organization set up to educate and get people involved. There is also a Save Darfur Club that meets on campus. They are having an event that starts Friday the 9th of November at 7pm and continues through the next morning at 7am. It is called "Change for Change" - the concept is to raise what money they can and mostly to raise awareness for Darfur so as many people as possible get involved. Please help make a difference!

2nd floor Student Center
In honor of the Mexican celebration, Dia de los Muertos or Day of the Dead, we would like to invite you to participate in a more than 500 year old Aztec tradition of creating altars commemorating our beloved departed ones. Ofrendas or altars include photos of our loved ones, their favorite foods as well as traditional ones such as pan de muertos sweet bread associated with this day, chocolate, as the Aztecs venerated it, and sugary candies in the shape of skulls. We have all lost someone in our lives or know someone who has. This is an opportunity to remember special people in a creative, positive and meaningful way. Please feel free to participate at any level you like, you may simply listen to the talk, include your own personal items and photos in the altar or just help with the altar installation and have some creative input. Rest assured that your personal items will be watched over during the day and you can retrieve them at 4:00 pm that afternoon.

In May, 2005 he was invited to speak before the U.N. Human Rights. In March, 2006, Mr. Deng launched the Sudan Freedom Walk, trekking 300 miles from United Nations headquarters in New York City to the Capitol in Washington, D.C., to call for an end to slavery and genocide in Sudan. AIDS Quilt Opening Speaker: "Living and Loving in a World with AIDS" Elaine Pasqua
Friends Hall @ 1 pm
AIDS is a disease that is not going away. For the past several years the rate of new HIV infections in the United States has held steady at 40,000. Fifty percent of those cases are occurring in the 15 to 24 year old age group, and within that group, female heterosexual infection is rising at a dramatically disproportionate rate. "Living and Loving in a World With AIDS" is an eye-opening, interactive program for those who think it could not happen to them. A passionate and engaging storyteller, audiences are riveted as Elaine shares the struggles of losing two parents to AIDS and engages them on the realities of prevention. Elaine Pasqua is the president of Project Prevent, a non-profit organization whose purpose is to provide AIDS prevention education to students. She has been featured in USA Today, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Knight Ridder News Service and Time Warner Cable TV. Elaine has also been instrumental in organizing events for AIDS awareness programming for the James A Michener Art Museum involving national political figures.http://www.elainepasqua.co

A Special Poem
"World on the Brink of Death"
by Sarah Denson

Each day is a lifetime
When a hero stands up at noon
And shouts
"I will save the earth!"
She gains allies for her fight
They challenge the world to change-
To stop destruction and bloodshed
She is scared of what will happen,
But heroes face their fears-
So she won't give up.

Each day is a lifetime
When a hero saves a life at dusk,
A little boy screams for help
And the hero stands up to save him
When no one else would
It is only one life,
But heroes know even one life makes a difference-
So she doesn't get discouraged.

Each day is a lifetime
When a hero sits to watch the moon rise
In a world she never gave up on;
And as she sighs at the sight of such beauty
Death comes to claim his prize.
But heroes know death is nothing to fear;
She has done what she could in her lifetime-
So her first steps are brave.

Happy Thanksgiving!

World AIDS Day
By Alana Berstein

The purpose of World AIDS Day is to educate people on the risk of the AIDS virus, and ways to prevent contracting the virus. While certain people may think that the incidence of HIV/AIDS has decreased, it has not, and in fact, if we continue on the track that we are on, will continue to increase. World AIDS Day is the perfect time for people to become acquainted with the proper information on HIV/AIDS, and make sure that they are armed with the correct knowledge to protect themselves.

World AIDS Day was created in 1988 by the World Summit of Ministers of Health on Programs for AIDS Prevention, and is held every year on December 1st. From 1988 until 2004, UNAIDS (the United Nations' committee regarding AIDS) ran the campaign and created different themes for each year. In 2005, the organization of World AIDS Day was turned over to World AIDS Campaign, who has created a general theme of Stop AIDS.

Keep the Promise to run through 2010, with sub-themes to run specifically for World AIDS Day each year. Themes for World AIDS Day have included Communication, Women and AIDS, Men Make a Difference, and Leadership.

Since its inception, World AIDS Day has become an official national event in the United States, and starting in 1995 and every year since, the President of the United States has made a proclamation on that day. Other nations have since followed suit.

According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), as of 2005, the estimated number of people living with AIDS in the United States and dependant areas was 433,760. This number includes the 418,084 adults and teenagers and the 3,787 children under 13 years in the 50 states and District of Columbia. In that same year, the estimated number of deaths of people with AIDS in the United States and dependant areas was 17,011. Of that number, 16,316 people were adults and adolescents, and 7 were children under 13 years in the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

In regards to worldwide statistics, Until There's A Cure (www.until.org) states that over 22 million people have died from AIDS, and over 42 million people are living with HIV/AIDS, with 74% of those infected are from sub-Saharan Africa. They also state that:

* over 19 million women are living with HIV/AIDS

* there are 14,000 new infections every day (95% in developing countries)

* half of the 5 million new infections each year [are] occurring among people ages 15 to 24

* the UN estimates that, as of 2006, there are 14 million AIDS orphans and that by 2010 there will be 25 million. (www.until.org/statistics.shtml)

There are many events that take place on World AIDS Day on college campuses, at hospitals, and through different organizations. This year, Ramapo College will be going to Newark, New Jersey to assist the residents of Broadway House for Continuing Care, which is "New Jersey's only specialized HIV/AIDS nursing care facility designed to meet the post-acute needs of people living with AIDS."
